OYSTER BILL WAS PASSED

The Jordan Bill Prevails by the Decisive Vote of 56 Ayes to 25 Noes.

MEDICAL COLLEGE BEATEN

Its Free Hospital Bill Discarded in Favor of the Sale Bill, Not Yet Passed.

yesstrday held long sessions, considering important bills, the House by a decisive majority passing the Jordan bill to break the Baylor survey and to lease barren and depleted dyster ground theredebate, voted down the Shackelford bill, proposing to appropriate $12,000 additional to the Medical College of Virginia for free treatment of the indigent sick of the Commonwealth. Instead, the Schato ordered to its engrossment the Sale bill, proposing to appropriate a sufficient sum for free treatment of the indigent sick at any chartered mospital, at a rate of seventy-five cents per day per patient. The rate of the bill when it comes up on its passage is exceedingly doubtful. If the bill can command the same proportion of the votes of the absences that it commanded of those present yesterday, when it comes up on its engressment it will be passed by the Senate with a vote to spare, presuming there is a full vote.

and the debates on the two important bills were very interesting. In the Senate almost the entire faculty and nearly all the student body of the Medical College was present at the Waterloo of their bill, as were many ladies, some of their bill, as were many ladies, some of which served as a diversion in the midst of the long argument.

In the House the feature of the debate was a spley collequy between Mr. Stubbs, the leader of the opposition, and Mr. Duke, of Albemarie, which is reported in detail below.

The Senate.

The attendance of senators was large when Lieutenant-Governor Willard called the body to order at noon yesterday.

Mr. Sears, of Mathews, offered an emergency bill amending the Code in relation to court terms. The bill is local.

The Senate joint revolution in relation to selecting taxt-books for use in the public schooks was passed by, as was the bill in relation to Capitol enlargement, owing to the absence of Senator Anderson and Chairman Wickham of the Finance Counnittee.

Leave of absence for Senator Thomas, of Campbell, was asked and granted.

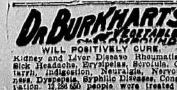

The hour for the special hour was then announced and the Shackelford bill proposing an appropriation for free medical treatment for the indigent poor of the treatment for the indigent poor of the State at the hospital of and by the phyhald before the Benate, and the two bliss were discussed simultaneously. For near ly three hours the discussion continued, six senators taking part in the debate, which was at times serious and at times of a humorous turn.

Mr. Shackelford, of Orange, the patron Mr. Shackelford, of Orange, the patron of the original bill, opened the discussion and closed in earnest speeches, in which he defended the constitutionality of the bill and the proposed appropriation, and appealed for this charity in the interest of the indigent sick of the State interest of the indigent sick of the State
He contended vigorously for the treatment by the Medical College of Virginia.
He had no criticisms to make of othes nospitals, and admitted that St. Vincent's, of Norfolk, and others were excellent institutions. He argued that it would be hest for the State to make this appropriation and have the indigent sick treated in the excellent hospital in this city, instead of scattering the funds all over the Commonwealth as proposed by the

NO OFFENSE INTENDED.

Mr. Sale, of Norfolk, patron of the substitute, opened the debate for the measure in a clear, forceful and carnest plea. He disclaimed the contention that his bill was in the interest of any institution, but asserted that it would bring the benefit of treatment nearer to the homes of the people and would not be a discrimination in fayor of one hospital. He defended the other hospitals of the State, of which there are fourteen, and contended that they were equipped to treat the indigent sick. In the course of his speech, Mr. Sale made some reference to a statement made by Mr. Shackelford, who denied that he had made the statement. In referring to what he had understood the senator to say, Mr. Sale again referred to the matter, whoreupon Mr. Shackelford, with some spirit arose to ask if the speaker meant to assert that he had said he had denied saying. Mr. Sale calmly assured the senator from Orange that he had no intention to contradict him, and the incident passed pleasantly. Continuing his speech, Mr. Sale made a persausive argument for his bill, pointing out that several thousand more persons could be treated under the terms of the Sale bill than under the Shackelford bill. He paid a fine tribute to the St. Vincent's Hospital, and stated that the NO OFFENSE INTENDED.

Mr. Sadler took the floor in opposition to both bill and substitute, expressing grave doubt as to the constitutionality of either. Of the two, he thought the Sale bill was preferable, if either were con-stitutional. Mr. Sadler promised to speak only ten minutes and kopt his promise to the minute, making a clear statement of his position with reference to the pending

Mr. Barksdale, of Halifax, was the next speaker, addressing the Senate for about twenty-five minutes. Mr. Barksdale spoke in his characteristic vein, interspersing his arguments with satirical thrusts at the doctors generally taking a shot or two at Mr. Sadler by cal thrusts at the doctors generally, taking a shot or two at Mr. Sadler by way of pleasantry and antagonizing the Sale bill in a vigorous way. He expressed the belief that if a bill were parsed which would enable all the hospitals to take advantage of the appropriation, it would be scattered all over the State. If Norfolk were allowed to share in it, all the wharf rats and riffraff of floaing population would be treated there. He delivered his thrusts at Norolk in his breezy, semi-humorous raff of floaing population would be treated there. He delivered his thrusts at Noroik in his breezy, semi-humorous way, and his speech was interspersed with bright and sharp rotorts in response to interruptions. In the course of the speech he managed to ring in his usual eulogy of "old Halifax". The speech of the senator from Halifax was easily the most entertaining of the seasion. He contended in his serious moments for the passage of the Shackelford bill, but rapped the doctors sharply on their proverbial differences, the conseiquences of which were usually suffered by the patients. The large crowd enjoyed the diversion afforded by the speech.

Mr. Barksdale was followed by Mr. Phiegar in a characteristically serious and earnest argument for the Shackelford bill. Mr. Phiegar defended the constitutionality of the measure and argued that it was wisdom for the State to confine the freatment to one city with a well coursel land accession.

he defended Norfolk and the Dill, and he defended Norfolk and the city on the taxes it paid and the contribution it made to the prosperity of the State.

DEFENDS LYNCHBURG.
Senator Sale furnished the opening Senator Barksdale had been awaiting, and the belligerent senator was instantly on his feet in refort. He contrasted the showings made by the city of Norfolk and the city of Lynchburg in the auditor's reports of the returns of personal property for taxation, showing that though Norfolk was almost twice the population of Lynchburg, the latter city paid nearly twice as much in taxes on personalty as Norfolk. Not satisfied with this retort, he launched into a condemnation of the disgraceful political methods recently unearthed in Norfolk and decared that they were a disgrace to the State. In many other places such political methods would provoke a mob, but this people of Norfolk sat supinely under the stigms. In the course of his speech Mr Sadler suggested that Mr. Barksdale, had caused a tempest in a tea-pot. "Well, I accept that," retorted the Hallfax senator; "I am the tempest, you the tea-pot." This sally provoked laughter. Mr. Sears, of Mathews, closed the debate for the Sale bill in a brief speech. He had had considerable doubt as to the propriety of passing either bill, he said, and with him the only question was now, which is the better measure or the State? He regarded the Shackelford bill as a Senator Barksdale had been awaiting, and the belligerent senator was instantly and with him the only question was now, which is the better measure or the State? He regarded the Shackelford bill as a discrimination, and he was opposed to it for that reason. The speaker pointed out the advantages of the bill, as he conceived them, and commended the other hospitals of the State. He reminded the advocates of the Shackelford will that there was another medical colminded the advocates of the Shackelford bill that there was another medical college in this city and many hospitals. Mr. Phiegar interrupted to ask if there were any other hospitals where State students received the benefit of instruction as a result of the passage of a bill for free treatment. Mr. Sears did not answer categorically, but was proceeding to do so argumentatively, when Mr. Phiegar pressed him to answer the question, and with great persistence reliterated it and challenged an answer. Mr. Sears, however, answered it in his own way.

Mr. Shackelford closed the debate in an argument for the bill, in the course of which he answered some of the objec-tions to the measure pointed out and denied having brought up the old figh denied having brought up the old fight between the rival doctors and colleges. He closed with a strong plea for the bill in the interest of humanity.

The pending question was then called and ordered, it being on the adop-tion of the Sale amendment in the nature of a substitute for the Shackolford bill. To the surprise of the many friends of the Shackelford bill present the Sale bill was adopted instead by a vote of sevenwas adopted instead by a vote or seven-teen to ten, as follows:

The question then recurred on the engressment of the Sale bill and it was ordered, 15 to 12, as follows:

The bill was then passed by and will tome up on its passage in a few days. It will require six more votes than recorded for its engrossment in order to pass the bill. There were thirteen absentees, and it may be that this number can be gotten from these thirteen. The can be gotten from these thirteen. The impression is strong, however, that the bill will fall of passage. The Senate at 3:15 P. M. adjourned atter the longest session of the year.

One of the kindergariens of the city, about forty strong, in charge of several fair teachers, crowded into one of the galleries during the debate, and attracted considerable attention.
Mr. Gravely, af Honry, was the first speaker on the oyster measure. He spoke briefly against the passage of the measure, and declared that he did not think it was a proper one to put on the statute books in its present shape.
Mr. Rew followed Mr. Gravely, and his effort was an exceptionally strong one. He appealed to the House in elequent terms not to pass a bill which would inflict a great injustice upon his people, and which was both unfair and unconstitutional. Mr. Rew declared that it was not proper to send a partisan commensure of the proper to send a partisan commensure of the passage of the proper to send a partisan commensure of the passage of the proper to send a partisan commensure of the passage of

Mr. Rew declared that it was not proper to send a partisan commission to deal with the very vitals of his people, and he argued at some length that the bill was not such a one as would, in his judgment, bring in any additional revenue to the public treasury.

Mr. Rew's percention was vigorous and elequent, and he was loudly cheered when he had resumed his seat.

Mr. Cardwell spoke for the bill, and before he had proceeded far he was plied with questions from many sources, Messrs. Rew and Withers asking the major part of them.

It looked at one time as if there might he a compromise, which would be agreeable to both sides. Mr. Rew said that if the words "exhausted" and "depleted" should be stricken out, and the commission chosen from without the Legislature he would support the bill, and he was followed by Messrs.

SHOW OF FEELING.

Mr. Hunley, of Mathewa, opened his steech in opposition to the bill with a declination to serve as a member of the committee to make the resurvey, based upon the reasons given in an interview of yesterday.

The member from Mathews spoke at some length as to the merits of the bill, and undertook to reply to the points brought out on the other stic.

He paid a tribute to the nonesty of Mr. Jordan, but declared that the bill he had offered was not a proper one.

He referred to the fact that the patron himself had not been sure of his ground and had sent the bill to Courts of Justico to see if it were constitutional.

Mr. Hunley appealed to the Legislature not to pass this bill, which would be unfair to his people, and the Tidewater contingent cheered him when he resumed his seat.

Mr. Hunley had made one of the strong spacehes against the passage of the bill, and it was with some show of feeling that he besought the House in the interest of his native section of Virginia.

At 1 o'clock Mr. Hunley resumed his seat, and Mr. Jordan, the patron, arose to close the debate for the measure. The member from Frederick spoke with his accustomed vigor. He sail that there was a demand for the fivaking of the survey, not only from the apland section of the State, but from Tidewater as well.

He spoke of the much discussed trip

Roads Committee Ask Legal 'Advice on Railroad Bill.

vice on Railroad Bill.

The House Committee on Reads yesterday afternoon, in executive session, decided to report the Caton and Churciman bill, changing the method of taxing the rolling stock of railway companies, to the House, and ask that it be committed to the Committee for Courts of Justice for their report upon its constitutionality.

The bill proposes to distribute the taxes upon the rolling stock of the various companies among the counties through which the roads run, instead of allowing the cities where the roads are domicied to have the entire amount.

The measure has been ably championed on both sides, Hon, W. R. Allen, of Botetourt, leading the fight for its adoption, and Messrs, H. R. Follard, W. A. Glasgow, Jr., and other strong attorneys representing cities in opposition.
